St. Charles, MO February 10, 2009 – On Safer Internet Day, KidsBeSafeOnline LLC launches a resource for parents regarding safety, technology and kids, and the Internet with the website www.KidsBeSafeOnline.com. KidsBeSafeOnline LLC is known nationally for the work they have done to promote safer Internet practices with their involvement in public forums and government processes as a guide for lawmakers providing resources to promote parental awareness and education as it relates to technology.

KidsBeSafeOnline LLC publishes a monthly newsletter, articles and educational materials; its website promotes parental awareness by providing resources, best practices, and tools to aid parents in protecting their children online. In addition, Denise Pellow, creator of KidsBeSafeOnline LLC, speaks in local communities to parents and teachers on the trends concerning kids, technology and the Internet and how to prevent tragic situations from happening to them and their families.

“Children are encountering instances online that they are not aware of and do not know how to handle. These circumstances are a growing problem in our local communities in America and around the world,” says Pellow.

Working closely with industry experts in the field of child psychology, law enforcement, parental control software companies, government and computer forensics, KidsBeSafeOnline LLC incorporates these resources with continual technology updates as it relates to kids and the changing trends in technology.
